AGENDA ITEMS:

Minor changes to the academic standing policy were approved (proposed changes are indicated below).

The meeting was adjourned at 3:50pm

No-Test Days

A five-day period, designated as No-test Days, precedes the five days of final examinations which are normally scheduled at the close of each academic semester. During No-test Days, no major examinations, including final examinations, will be given in order that students may concentrate on classwork, the completion of special assignments, writing projects, and other preparation for duly scheduled final examinations. Approved exceptions include: final papers; weekly chapter quizzes; quizzes, projects, or examinations associated with a lab that does not meet during final examinations; and final examinations for broadcast courses.

Academic Standing Policy

(Only segments with recommended changes are included below)

Notifications, Transcript Notations, and Registration Holds

An undergraduate student placed on academic warning or academic probation shall be notified in writing of that action by his or her college dean, advisor, or other college or departmental representative. An undergraduate student placed on academic suspension shall be notified in writing of that action by the Office of Retention and Student Success (or by the Academic Advising and Orientation Office at USU-CEU). Since these notifications will typically be sent by e-mail, it is the student's responsibility to check his or her preferred e-mail account as designated in Access (see E-mail Communication Policy). A notation Academic Warning, Academic Probation, or Academic Suspension is placed on the student's transcript. Students on academic warning or academic probation will have a hold placed on their registration and must meet with their academic advisor.

Academic Standing for Student Athletics Eligibility

Student athletes are considered, for purposes of athletics eligibility and NCAA or NJCAA intercollegiate competition, to be in good standing if they meet the applicable NCAA or NJCAA grade point average rule and are able to register for classes and attend during the next subsequent regular academic semester.

Suspension Appeal Process

Any suspended student wishing to appeal his or her academic suspension must meet with the matriculation advisor, located in the Office of Retention and Student Success (or the Academic Advising and Orientation Office at USU-CEU), and express a desire to make an appeal. Students should understand that, while they are entitled to appeal their suspension, very few appeals will be approved.

The student must write an appeal letter and complete an appeal form. The appeal letter must include: (1) a clear explanation as to why the student believes the suspension penalties should be lifted, (2) an account of reasons why the student feels he or she didn't perform well, and (3) a description of the student's plan for improvement.

~~The matriculation advisor, who serves as t~~The chair of the Suspension Appeals Committee will submit the appeal letter (attached to the student's transcript) to the committee. The ~~matriculation advisor chair~~ will contact the student's academic advisor to solicit additional information that might be relevant to the committee's decision. Additionally, the matriculation advisor will find out if the student's department supports a suspension reversal or not.

Readmission Following Academic Suspension

Students who have been suspended once may apply for readmission after a one-semester layout at USU-CEU, or a two-semester layout at USU. Students who have been suspended two times may apply for readmission following a layout of one full calendar year.
