College Launches Construction Program

By Gwen Hunsaker Haws '43
U. S. A. C. News Bureau

A post-war construction program is now under way on the Aggie campus and those who haven't been on the Hill for a few months, will find "there've been some changes made."

Major change is the huge H-shaped technology building over on the southeastern corner of the campus. Finishing touches are now being placed on this $215,000 structure, which will house the automotive department, the aeronautics department, and will include offices and four classrooms. The present Mechanic Arts building will be remodeled to provide additional classroom space for regular college work.

North and slightly west of the technology building, a $75,000 maintenance shop is nearing completion. It will provide a central location for all of the maintenance services at the college.

A few weeks ago, a 37-year-old landmark on the Aggie campus bit the dust. The huge brick smokestack which rose 80 feet above the college heating plant was toppled. Engineers feared that excavations for the new heating plant had undermined the footing until there was danger that it might crash into the forestry building. Three steel smokestacks will be erected to take the place of the old chimney and to carry the increased load of the new heating plant. The new plant will provide more than twice the present heating facilities.

Contractors have begun work on a $100,000 poultry plant, located two miles north of Logan. The board of trustees has approved the construction of a greenhouse costing approximately $50,000.

Plans are also going ahead for the construction and financing of a student union building. Other needs, which President Franklin S. Harris says will be met as soon as practicable, include an agriculture and forestry hall, and an auditorium and humanities building.

In addition to the construction of new buildings, an extensive remodeling program has also been underway this summer. The "Old Main" has received a major face lifting, beginning with a widened and improved driveway in front of the building and along the brow of College Hill. The new curbing and surfacing make the driveway more scenic and safe and provide better drainage. Another convenience will be a new sidewalk leading directly from the parking lot to the Main building.

Steps at the North entrance to the building have been replaced with wider and longer ones. The program includes replacement of steps at the East and South entrances also. Outside doors to the build-

• NATIONAL RECOGNITION came to two Aggie graduates, Dr. P. V. Cardon and Dr. Byron T. Shaw, shown above, when they were named to the top posts in an important division of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Two Aggie Alumni Get Top Spots In Washington Appointments

Dr. Philip V. Cardon and Dr. Byron T. Shaw, two prominent Utah State graduates, have recently been named to direct the work of the United States Agricultural Research Administration by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan.

Dr. Cardon was appointed head of the agency—the top agricultural research position in the nation—and at the same time Dr. Shaw was appointed deputy administrator. A holder of the Distinguished Service Award of the Department of Agriculture, Dr. Cardon received his B.S. degree from the college in 1909. He is native of Logan. Dr. Shaw, also a Cache Valley native, graduated from Utah State with the class of 1930. Dr. Cardon's wife, Leah Ivins Cardon is an Aggie graduate with the class of 1911. She was an instructor in the school of Home Economics at the College in 1912-13. The couple have three children.

Dr. Cardon again brings to the position a wealth of experience in research and research administration including three years as farm economist with the USAC Experiment Station and seven years as director of the Station. He held the same federal post until about three years ago when he resigned because of ill health.

Dr. Shaw has worked with the Department of Agriculture since 1943 as a soils physicist. Before going to Washington D.C. he was professor of soils at Ohio State university. He is married to Ruth Curry of Columbus, Ohio.

Aggies Take Season Opener September 17; Prepare For Tougher Games Ahead

With their first season encounter tucked under their belts, Utah Aggie football charges were rounding into shape for the remaining 10 games on their varied and difficult schedule. First conference clash comes Friday October 1, with Colorado A. & M. in Logan under the lights.

The opening game of the season was played September 17 in the Aggie stadium with Montana State. Utah State came off the field with an easy 31-6 point score.

Although six regular positions on Coach E. L. "Dick" Romney's machine are suffering from graduation losses last spring, the genial mentor is fielding a potentially power aggregation. The team promises trouble for the Skyline league big-wigs and should garner more than their share of victories.

Absent from the blue and white ranks are 11 veteran lettermen including all-conference choices Ralph Maughan, Buss Williams, and George Nelson. Back to serve as a framework for the Ag grid team are Dale Panter, Lane Nalder, Lloyd Hayes, guards; Moroni Schwab and Bill Nelson, tackles; Keith Hughes, Nog Hansen, and Kent Murdock, ends; John Caputo, quarterback; Jay Van Noy, half back; and Verle Kidman, center. Most of these men have at least two years experience notched up.

Working well into the Romney T are a host of promising sophomores from last year's undefeated frosh eleven. They include Non Johnson, Cleon Hodges, Bob Adams, and Norris Johnson, backs; Hal Garner, Hal Romney, and Darrell Guthrie, linemen. These lads are going to be pushing the older boys for starting slots all season.

Romney has his same talented staff of last year back to assist him. Howard "Tuff" Linford and Joe Whitesides are working with the line. Paul Marston and Marv Bell are assisting with the backfield.

"A" Men Plan Series of Activities

Officers of the Utah State "A" Men's Association met on the campus September 8 for a business meeting and to get acquainted with members of the 1948-49 football squad.

Heading the topics discussed at the session was the problem of securing scholarships for needy Aggie athletes in order that they might continue their schooling. Conley Watts reported on the work of the scholarship committee.

Homecoming plans were discussed and the regular "A" Men's business meeting was scheduled for Saturday morning, October 23, at Hotel Eccles—Homecoming day. A special letter concerning this meeting will be sent to members. The "A" Men are planning special activities for the evening prior to the Thanksgiving Day football encounter with the University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

"A" Men's headquarters for the coming Aggie home football games will be established at Hotel Eccles, according to Cantril (Flash) Nielsen, president of the group.

Thanksgiving Day

With Thanksgiving day not too far distant plans are already underway for the annual trek when Aggies new and old converge on the capitol city to witness the annual Turkey day football clash with the University of Utah.

This affair has grown in popularity with each successful staging and under present athletic contracts promises to be an annual festivity for some time. The Aggie-U game

• REED BULLEN '29. . . Heads 1948 Aggie Homecoming Committee.

Big Time Promised AT Homecoming

Preparations for this year's Homecoming on the Utah State campus swung into high gear this week with the opening of the Fall quarter. The return of student leaders opened the way for quick decisions on plans which have been shaping up in the Alumni Office for the past two months.

Heading the Homecoming arrangements committee will be Reed Bullen '29, manager of radio station KVNU in Logan. Reed has been an ardent supporter of alumni and college activities and it is felt that he will do an outstanding job as director of planning and of events.

It is confidently expected that this year's Homecoming program will be one of the biggest and best yet. The time is October 23 and the team we play will be Brigham Young University. Special attractions are being planned by the School of Engineering which will welcome back its alumni with an organizational meeting. The School of Agriculture is planning something special too. Other departments are busy making plans. The Foresters, of course, will have their annual breakfast. A full program will be mailed to all alumni by October 10.

Tickets for the game will be sold at $2.00 each. Reservations may be made any time by sending your check to the Alumni Office.

now ranks with many of the nation's top "feudin" games.

This year's get-together will be replete with special activities on Thanksgiving eve. Aggie headquarters are again set for Newhouse Hotel where a huge pep rally will be held. A parade down Salt Lake's thoroughfare will precede the rally.

The Alumni Office will coordinate plans for the occasion. Anyone interested in the meantime may contact the Alumni Secretary.

● DR. WILLARD GARDNER '12 . . .
"the father of soil physics in the United States".

Society of Agronomists

Two prominent Utah State alumni members, Dr. Willard Gardner, professor of physics at the college, and Dr. P. V. Cardon, newly appointed U.S.D.A. Agriculture Research Administration head, have been elected fellows of the American Society of Agronomists—one of the highest honors accorded by the Society.

Dr. Gardner is noted for his outstanding research in the soil science field. In the citation he is referred to as the "father of soil physics in the United States". Dr. Cardon, who was given an honorary doctor of laws degree by Utah State last spring, was recognized by the society for his long years of excellent work in agricultural research.

Graduate School

The year 1947-48 was a banner year for the USAC graduate school. A total of 237 individuals were enrolled to continue their training beyond the bachelor's level, according to Dr. B. L. Richards, Graduate School dean.

Of the 237 students matriculating, 170 applied for work leading to a master of science degree. A total of 65 were graduated in June this year—largest number of M.S. degrees conferred in a graduating class in the school's history.

Twenty-nine departments of the college are now concerned with graduate work. The education field is currently leading the list with most students enrolled in graduate study.

● President Harris Extends Greetings . . .

The Alumni Association of Utah State Agricultural College is to be congratulated on the fine work it is now doing. Mr. McDonald has reorganized the office and has his mailing list in better condition than it has ever been. He and the other officers of the Association are planning great things to make those who have been graduated from the College proud of the fact that they belong to this Alumni Association.

The fact that the Union Building is about to move forward gives the Association a worthwhile project to which they can give their best efforts. Architect Markham is in the midst of drawing the plans, and the location has been decided on. We are expecting that the ground will be broken next spring. The many activities on the campus should give every alumnus enthusiasm for his Alma Mater.

The Institution has had a long period of service, and has a long list of graduates, but never in the history of the College has the prospect been brighter than at the present time. Those who are on the campus every day are full of enthusiasm for the work to be done.

Signed: FRANKLIN S. HARRIS

President

Student Life

When Louis Bate, 1948-49 editor of Student Life, took over his duties last spring, he was given an abundance of advice, help and condolences. Five ex-editors of the campus weekly, all on the campus at the time, were on hand to introduce the new chief to his job.

Veteran of the group was Calder Pickett, 1943-44 editor and former instructor of journalism at the college. He is now employed at The Deseret News.

Other editors on hand and the years they edited the sheet included: Harry L. Bonnell, 1944-45; John Stewart, 1945-46; Nola A. Pickett, 1946-47, and Bob Welch, 1947-48.

Bonnell and Welch are both back on the campus completing requirements for graduation in the spring. Stewart, present Utah Extension Service editor, is also working on needed classwork for graduation with the class of '49.

Mrs. Pickett, who is married to ex-Editor Calder Pickett, received her B.S. degree at commencement last spring. They are living in Salt Lake City.

Student Life received its four "All-American" ratings during the terms of these five editors.

Student Enrollment

Student enrollment at Utah State reached a new high last year, but indications are that this fall will mark an all time peak in student attendance at Utah State.

Two weeks prior to registration last year, Registrar William H. Bell '23 had received 1329 applications from transfers and new students—transfers and freshmen are required to make application prior to registering. This year the Registrar reports 1580 applications. Fall quarter registration for last year totaled 4068. Registrar Bell is making no statements but is preparing 4500 registration books to handle the anticipated bumper student crop.

Cumulative registration for 1947-48 school year reached 4853. Male students of that number totaled 3719 while 1134 were women.

Veterans attendance at Utah State seems to have reached a peak and is slowly ebbing. Vet percentage for 1945-6 school year was 48% of the total enrollment; 1946-7, 61%; 1947-8, 53%.

The Aggie summer school enrollment set a new record this past year. The cumulative total of students attending both summer sessions was 1775. Previous all time high was 1492 in '47, according to Dean Milton R. Merrill '25.

Editor's note: Hope Reeder, who writes the following letter concerning her experiences in Europe, is a 1931 graduate of Utah State and is now serving as head cataloger and assistant librarian in the United Nations Library, Geneva, Switzerland. She is a native of Corinne, Utah. Following her graduation from the college, Hope was reference librarian at the USAC until 1937. Prior to her UN assignment she was cataloger in the library of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

My work at the United Nations in Geneva has placed me in an extremely interesting situation, with the opportunity of meeting people of many nations and positions. In my department, no two persons are of the same nationality, and I am continually fascinated by differences in national customs and ways of thinking. Living in Geneva today is not far different from life in the average medium-sized American city as far as normalcy and supply of goods are concerned.

At Easter time I took my first trip "afield", going to southern France and the Riviera, by way of the Maritime Alps. It was a marvelous opportunity to note the people's simple ways of living, such as: doing the family laundry at the public water-place with only the use of a brush and a cement slab, plowing the fields with oxen and crude plows, etc. Not even two wars of the twentieth century appear to have altered the quiet lives of these people.

Situation Improved

The Mediterranean coast, however, presented a different picture. It was said that the German invaders enjoyed the luxuries and the pleasures to be found at Nice and Monte Carlo, and so they were spared the destruction which was inflicted upon the other major coastal cities. Going from Geneva in March to tropical Nice with its palm-lined avenues and flower gardens was extremely enjoyable. But tragic reminders came as we took boat trips out into the Toulon harbor of the scuttled French fleet, and through the destroyed port of Marseille, for here the shells of walls and the empty harbors remained to testify of the sweep of the war machine. Although street cars lumbered along, full of bullet holes, with broken windows unrepaired, and absolutely paintless, yet an observing woman told me that the French situation had improved, for the people looked better fed and clothed than when she last visited France in November 1945.

Tragic Picture

I have just returned from a summer vacation trip which took me through five countries, and provided a marvelous first-hand opportunity to note and contrast present conditions in Germany as against those of the German occupied countries of France, Belgium, Luxembourg, and Holland. When I read in a Paris newspaper that the Allied Military Authorities had agreed to permit the first group of tourists to enter post-war Germany, I immediately investigated, with the result that I joined this group. The trip was conducted in beautiful style. We travelled in large limousines which have only come "out of hiding" since the German currency reform of June twentieth. All of our food was imported from the United States, and we stayed in hotels which had been repaired for the use of Allied civilian personnel. Our tour was restricted to the United States occupation zone of central and southern Germany, and it was said to be the only part of Germany which is in condition today to receive tourists. We started from Frankfurt (am Main), and travelled in a large circle through Nuremberg, Munich, Stuttgart, Heidelberg, and back to Frankfurt. Of these cities, only Heidelberg stands intact today, and it is a gem! How the strains of the "Student Prince" echoed through my ears as I passed through the old University halls and the student jail! But any pleasant memories one had of the other cities named, were countered with the tragic picture of the present as one was confronted with shells of buildings, a chimney here, a section of a wall there, and heaps of bricks, twisted steel, and debris everywhere.

To see such large areas of these cities in ruins, and yet to see the squares and streets everywhere filled with people, caused us to inquire of our native German guides as to present population figures. In each case, the figures given indicated that although there had been war deaths, yet an influx of refugees from the Russian zone had actually kept the population constant, or resulted in an increase. People live in basements underneath the six persons to one room. Some of the stores have now made sufficient repairs to have a tiny cottage-size display window, which people crowded around, standing three and four deep, to get a glimpse of the meagre show of a pair of shoes or a piece of dress material.

In Luxembourg, Belgium, France and Holland a far different picture confronted us. The heaps of war debris had been cleared away, and although in many places only great crater holes remain where once a residential or business section thrived, yet in other places many new buildings have been constructed, and the work of reconstruction is visibly proceeding.

Belgium appears to be the most nearly normal of the western European countries today, yet one must be cautioned against taking too much for granted the railroads, highways and bridges one sees everywhere, for actually many of these are replacements since the war. Many cities in Holland have become new cities of the 1947-1948 period, for practically whole cities have been rebuilt, in many cases, and this is in itself a tribute to the dogged determination of the people.
