CPD BLOG NAMED AS ONE OF 50 BEST BLOGS

December 2, 2010 by cpehrson

The Center for Persons with Disabilities Blog has been named as one of the 50 Best Blogs for School Counselors by the Masters Degree website.

Blog sites are selected by what information will help school counselors stay on top of breaking news, legislation, and current debates and discussions on issues that impact lawmakers, parents, teachers, and students.

The CPD Blog was chosen because it “gives more insight into how people with disabilities learn, find jobs, and are treated in society.”

We strive to write about current disability issues, CPD projects that are making a difference in the lives of people with disabilities, people whose lives have benefited from the work done at the CPD, pertinent legislation that impacts those with disabilities and their families, and information that will improve the lives of individuals with disabilities.

The CPD Blog will continue to post information that will help those with disabilities and the people who work with them. We welcome your comments.
