ANOTHER YEAR, ANOTHER DAY ON THE QUAD

August 24, 2011 by JoLynne Lyon

The Center for Persons with Disabilities will have representatives out on the Quad on August 31, ready to answer your questions about who we are, what we do and what study and volunteer opportunities are available to students. Look for our canopy on August 31 from 10:30 to 2.

Our representatives will be on hand to give you more information on our undergraduate research program, which allows participants to gain real-world experience while confronting problems in our society. Graduates and upperclassmen, our Interdisciplinary Awareness and Service Learning class will increases your understanding of people with disabilities and their families, provide plenty of service opportunities and help you find ways to better include people with disabilities into your work, home and business.

Volunteer opportunities are also available. We are looking for groups who could assist in improvement projects, music therapy or a day of games at the Disability Skills Laboratory, as well as individuals willing to work with young adults to help with social skills and tutoring. People with a strong interest in working with adults with developmental disabilities are especially encouraged to talk to our volunteer coordinator, Jeff Sheen.

While we're only on the quad for one day, we're on Facebook and Twitter 24/7. Visit anytime!
