INTRODUCTION

A collaborative group project addressing the refugee housing dilemma in Salt Lake City. After researching current refugee housing and interviewing refugee caseworkers, we have discovered many of the needs that the refugee population in Salt Lake City face. The following is our solution to address these problems: First, these families need sustainable, comfortable, clean, reliable, and affordable housing where they can feel at home and find comfort in having their own home. We will be exploring the idea of creating a safe haven community for these refugees, a place that will help them integrate into the community and have the opportunity to socialize with locals and become an integral part of Utah.

RESEARCH

“A refugee, by definition, is someone who, owing to a well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, is outside the country of his or her nationality and is unable to or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country” (Cultural Orientation Resource Center, 2017). Refugees are legally brought to the United States by the U.S. Department of State. They may become permanent residents after working for a year and can apply for citizenship after five years. They can legally work in the U.S. as soon as they arrive (OCRC, 2017).

Previous to arriving in their country of refuge, many of these refugees live in refugee camps along the borders of their homelands or in a neighboring country. By the time a refugee makes it to Utah, he or she might have lived in a refugee camp for many years. Some younger people have even been born in one of these camps. Before a refugee comes to the U.S. he or she can request to be brought to the United States. This order allows into the United States in ten years. This order cut the admitted number to more than half, from 110,000 to 50,000 a year. This order also completely stopped immigration from Syria. In 2017, U.S. President Donald Trump limited the number of refugees that could enter the United States. This order cut the admitted number to more than half, from 110,000 to 50,000 a year. This order also completely stopped immigration from Syria.

In 2017, U.S. President Donald Trump issued an executive order on refugees, limiting the number of refugees that could enter the United States. This order cut the admitted number to more than half, from 110,000 to 50,000 a year. This order also completely stopped immigration from Syria. PROCESS

We created a neighborhood that has a library, career center, daycare, community center, health clinic, farmers market, gardens, and park to help new refugees feel more grounded. It is a place that will help them integrate into the community and have the opportunity to socialize with locals and become an integral part of Utah.
