Email coming out from the Provost regarding the pass/fail option for students during the COVID 19 pandemic. This would apply to USU undergraduates, but the question was asked if graduate students should be included in the pass/fail grading. Another survey will be focused on the IDEA input from students. IDEA survey will be performed but will be sent to only faculty members. Faculty would like feedback to see what improvements or suggestions can be made. Final exams are coming up. Section II: Program Proposal

Proposed Action & Rationale

The College of Humanities and Social Sciences proposes this action to enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of academic program administration. This restructuring will better serve the needs of our students and the faculty in these diverse disciplines.

The Department of Languages, Philosophy and Communication Studies is an unusual conglomeration of disciplines and programs that does not exist as a department in any other university. When Brad Hall became head of the department in 2006 there were 28 benefitted faculty, eight majors (with distinct CIP codes), fourteen minors (with distinct CIP codes) and one graduate program. This coming year (2020-21) there will be 53 benefitted faculty, thirteen majors (with distinct CIP codes), sixteen minors (with distinct CIP codes), the English language institute, a new certificate program, and two graduate programs. The addition of 25 full-time faculty, five majors, three minors, a language institute, a certificate program, and a new graduate program has added to the complexity of what was already a diverse and programmatically unusual department when Professor Hall started his tenure as department head. Professor Hall will be stepping down from his role of department head at the end of the 20-21 academic year, and now is an ideal time to give greater focus and efficiency to the programs in each of the proposed departments. The restructuring will facilitate a stronger, clear base on which to build community for the students, faculty and alumni of the various programs. The proposed division will also allow for a clearer connection to regional, national, and international associations tied to the various programs. Unlike the unique combination that now exists, there are other universities that have departments that combine the programs which would be combined in the proposed action. Some of the programs in the current department have seen a high rate of student demand over recent years and the eclectic nature of the department is making it hard to meet the needs of our students.

The name of the department with the language programs in it will be the Department of World Languages and Cultures. This name was voted on and approved by the faculty who would be in this department. The name is a common name in the field and is the name used by the University of Utah, Oregon State University, University of Nevada-Las Vegas, and Iowa State University to name just a few. Based on Spring 2020 numbers in USU's evisionsArgos system, this department would serve 606 students based in Logan (180 majors, 390 minors, 36 on-campus international students in the Intensive English Language Institute). In addition, in the spring of 2020, the Intensive English program also served 139 Utah State students based outside of the United States. The lower-division language classes taught in this proposed department impact students across the university. For example, in 2018 students across 102 different majors took at least one of these lower-division language courses. Based on current numbers, this department will have thirty-two faculty members, including six full professors, fourteen associate professors, three assistant professors and nine full-time lecturers.

The name of the Department of Communication Studies and Philosophy is simply a merger of the two programs with the larger program listed first. The connection with a Communication Studies program and Philosophy program are not common. However, schools such as Florida Gulf State University and Keene State College do have this combination. Based on Spring 2020 numbers in USU's evisionsArgos system, this department would serve 406 students based on the Logan Main Campus (371 majors, 35 minors). In addition, this department would play a major role in helping students across the university complete General Education requirements as the department routinely teaches roughly 45 sections of classes that fill General Education requirements to well over a thousand students every semester. Based on current numbers, this department will have twenty-one faculty members, including six full professors, two associate professors, seven assistant professors, four full-time lecturers, and two postdoctoral teaching fellows.

Consistency with Institutional Mission and Institutional Impact

This is an administrative structural change to the academic programs within the College of Humanities and Social Sciences. This restructuring will allow for greater focus on the specific needs of the students in these programs and is fully in line with the mission of Utah State University.

Finances

The restructuring action is not creating new programs, so the funds currently supporting these programs will be reallocated in a manner that continues to support their implementation and will not require new fiscal resources. There will be two new department heads hired from an internal search and the college is already positioned to make these hires with resources that are coming to the college through early retirements. The current staff positions will be retained and assigned to each department in a way that allows the functions of each department to be supported.

Section I: The Request

R401 Purpose* Add 'Interventions for Secondary Students' as a new specialization within the existing Master's of Education in Curriculum and Instruction.

Section II: Program Proposal

Proposed Action & Rationale*

This specialization was originally recommended from approximately a dozen administrators who asked USU to offer their high school teachers with advanced training in interventions. Specifically, administrators want their teachers to be able to provide academic and behavioral supports to secondary students who exhibit multiple risk indicators, including low literacy, high absenteeism, and low engagement. Secondary general education teachers are content trained with minimal or no training in interventions to support students without disabilities requiring intensive interventions.

Labor Market

Demand (if applicable)

Consistency with Institutional Mission & Institutional Impact*

This specialization will be offered statewide via distance education with students having both a Plan B or C option like other specializations within the Masters of Education in Curriculum and Instruction program. Planning guides for both are attached.

Finances*

Since all courses within this proposed specialization already exist, no additional costs are anticipated.
