We believe the Honor System should be adopted by our student body.

We believe that no organizations within the student body should subordinate the student body for the furtherance of their individual interests.

PENELIZING

"Irresponsibles are cause of magazine hours being cut" appeared as head of an article in last week's issue of this publication. In the body of the article was found a program of study in the magazine which included only a limited number of hours being at a time when a librarian might be present to see that discipline of school property be carried no further. It is evident that every student is not guilty and for a few to be the cause of the penelizing of the entire student body seems most unfair. However, no other step seemed to have effect on magazine distribution.

The list of maintaining the magazine loan including subscriptions and cost of binding for future references reaches a total of $1200 per annum not to mention the work of librarians. The actual cost of replacing lost magazine amounts to $50 per year. That an Agric student would disregard future college students and school property to the extent of tearing leaves from and carrying away magazines that are to be compiled for use by "Agrics to be" places him far below that our institution claims, namely, student honesty. We feel hopeful when we notice a student pat his neighbor on the shoulder and gently remind him that "It is not his property." Would that we had more such students.

WE WANT FOUNDERS DAY TO BECOME PRECEDENT

The question deciding whether the College should be granted the privilege of commemorating her birthday every year will be settled on today.

We hope that a Founders Day celebration will be passed by the juryman deciding the case with unanimity so that the nascent addition to the College's calendar can receive a deeply rooted initiation into the soil of the college traditions on March 8, which will be 37 years after its natal day.

A Founders Day or anniversary celebration is one of the most conventional of American college traditions and traditions are one of the important vitamins of college life. So in adding Founders Day on the 8th of March to our list of traditions we would be adding another golden link to the chain of college life here.

As has been outlined in the plans for our Founders Day, the College alumni will be invited to attend the program and participate in the days event. This would be an invaluable advertising date for our summer schools, and would break into usual monotony of the winter quarter and allow the students to take in a few recuperative breaths before the winter quarter exams.

WHAT IS AN EDUCATED MAN?

Ramsay MacDonald, former prime minister of England, says that "the educated man is a man with certain subtle spiritual qualities which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings, rational and sane in the fullest meaning of that word in all the affairs of life."

"Certainly," says Ramsay MacDonald, "the educated man is not a learned man." By this he meant merely to say that a man is not educated because he is learned. "Nor is he an educated man simply because he is or has been a college or university man," adds the former labor minister.

Education cannot be measured by a system of credits, degrees, minutes or majors. One may have all of these and still be grossly uneducated. He may have all of these and still be a mediocre citizen in his community. He may have all of these and still lack any or all of the qualities that Mr. MacDonald mentions.

President Hopkins of Dartmouth also gives a definition for an educated man that might well be put beside that listed above. He says, "such a man must have been humble in the presence of great minds and great souls, must have been simple in the company with his fellows, and must have been indefatigable in his desire to cultivate and to maintain the power of his mind and to accumulate that knowledge which makes up the data of accurate reasoning."

It might not be amiss for students at this College to indulge occasionally in retrospection and by applying these tests determine the extent of their education.

STEAL NELSON WINS CONTEST

Article on "How to Go To School on 24 Hours Per Day" Wins Book

Stealing Nelson is the winner of the book offered this week by Dr. N. A. Peterson through Student Life.

On "How to Go to School on Twenty-four hours a Day."

Judging from the serious and practical class of all the contestants, that the thing can be done successfully and enjoyably. An especially practical plan, evidently most workable, and certainly worthy of special mention, was the one submitted by Clifford Jones, Mr. Nelson's discussion follows:

"It can't be done," or "It's all a hoax," are some of the flimsy material of the pessimist. Just wake up, shake yourself, open your eyes and after the mist has cleared away, look about and see what is being done by ambitious students. It's not half so bad as it appears. The whole trouble is in our customs, habits and traditions. What a difficult task throw off the old yoke. Many of us should get live in rock and wear skins of animals.

Think, I there is a job in being a student? Why not make the best of it? The first step to get to school on twenty-four hours a day. With this must come the stiffening of a backbone that will not melt away when the heat or difficulty proys on you. With these tools a strong foundation can be laid for the work and suggestion of accomplishments.

A well planned program will naturally follow. Hours for the physical and religious development as well as for studying will have a definite place. One hour will spend will equal a half dozen hours spent in the usual way by college students. First a statue across the study table. Then the book. Which is the most attractive to the student it is sometimes difficult to determine; only the professor knows.

Time must have a value for the student who is getting to school on twenty-four hours a day and he knows he must make the most of every minute. He has no time for frivolous parties every night out of the week and the coming to class in the morning ten minutes late and with such a vacant look that one would never suspect the culprit was one capable of learning the multiplication table.

If the student is going to be successful in this adventure, fiscal and spiritual discipline must be maintained. The student who is going to be successful in this adventure must be able to set aside with the traditions of the times and be must step out of his fashionable rags and be the real person. He knows the worth of a dollar and can tell the difference between a penny and a dime. Values of life are not measured in terms of money but in terms of their usefulness in service to mankind. Such a student cannot afford to be wasteful of energy. Everyone must be a profitable one and in the direction of his ultimate goal. Dissipation of time must not be tolerated if every second is to count.

Now, you may say, "Where is the money coming from?" Did you ever see an ambitious student who could not find some thing to do about his school work, which would provide the necessary funds? Merchants, professional men and doctors of various kinds in supplying the wants of humanity are looking for just such help.

Just start then you won't have to do much of a little cooking and domestic economy will be a great asset to your education. The "covies" will be better off without you. Someone you will know that to get to school on twenty-four hours a day is what made you a real man or woman.

Student of Last Year Describes Junior Prom at Chicago University

In a recent letter from Robert Hartlett, last year graduate and prominent Omega Psi, tells of the Junior Prom at the University of Chicago.

He describes it as being graduate work in chemistry. With tickets at $15.50, dress suits as essential as a white collar, decorations costing $2.50 for the rental and set and the orchestra costing $750.00, the affair proved most impressive to the former Agric. He declares, however, that the affair doesn't carry a lot more social spirit than the dances in the Smart symposium.

The Military Ball of Years Gone By

The Military Ball was in every way the success of the season. The guests were delighted and surprised to see the excellent work of the graduates.

At the head of the hall was the picture of George Washington. At the right was a large mounted picture of the same. The center was a stack of rifles and cannon with historic wheels. Over the door were the words "The Military Ball of Years Gone By."

Promptly at 8:30 the grand march began. Commandant Beas and Miss Mearns were the leaders. Following them were captains, lieutenants, other officers and privates in full dress uniform. From the bearing of the march one could see the advantage of military training.

For an hour and a half those present watched the dance. The crowd caused many "spats" and "retards."

Our military guests have always been characterized by the good, hearty, solid traits they provide, and this one not only sustains the reputation of the department but establishes a new and brilliant record.

College decorations were made by arranging guns and swords in attractive combinations. The letters U. A. C. were formed by placing flags. The rest little could get a two venerable flags adorned the perches of two eagles. In a remote corner, lighted dimly by red, white and blue light was a collection of relics of the Spanish American war.

Camp Fire Leadership Course Offered Coeds

Camp Fire Leadership is being taught in the Physical Education department at the University of Texas this year. The preliminary part is given by one of the regular instructors while the final lecture will be given by Miss Janet Ketter of the Girl Scout Headquarters at New York.

Regular lectures will be taken for work on week-end and outdoor cooking.

WHY DO WOMEN MARRY?

When I was a bachelor my room was empty and quiet. Now it is different. I am married. My wife tells the furnace fire get on so it is real cold sometimes. She always shakes out the socks before I can get them out. She always shakes out the socks before I can get them out.
