SALAD at L'Abbaye
Mrs. Morris: "The newest salad is lettuce cut up without dressing."

First Capon: "I understand Professor Warner recently had his appendix removed."

Second Capon: "Yes, poor man. He can be thankful, though, that it was only his appendix."

Third Capon: "If you don't get it, try, try, again. It's good!"

Tarrus saw the missus sewing on some dainty little clothes when he came home from classes Monday.

"My dear," he exclaimed, "why didn't you tell me?"

"Don't be silly," she said, giggling. "This is a new dinner gown."

TORGEON: "WILL YOU HAVE THIS EXAMINE MOUNTED ON PLAIN?"

LES POCKOCK: "I KNOW I'M NOT HANDSOME, BUT YOU DON'T NEED TO INSINUATE I'M A COW-BOY, TOO."

"Why did they dispute that game?"

"There were more men, but for football than were enrolled in school."

Tarrus wants to warn everybody about these tooth paste ads. He tried a tube this morning and damned if it would make his teeth stay in.

IT IS BETTER TO HAVE LOVED AND LOST—OH, MUCH BITTER!

"I see by the paper that there were a tremendous number of casualties today."

"I say! What paper, old chap?"

"Rand, the fly paper."

Tarrus heard a terrible shriek in the swimming pool while he was having a shower. Finding the door to the pool locked he broke a window and jumped in to discover a pretty girl standing near the edge weeping.

"What can be the trouble, child?" he asked.

"I can't swim," she sobbed.

"Why?" he gently inquired.

"Cause, I ain't in the water."

"Let's get married."

"Gee. If you're going to be crazy be a kleptomaniac and make it pay."

IN THE LOCKER ROOM
"DON'T BE EFFEMINATE, GUY. PUT SOME CLOTHES ON."

There was only one in the crowd when the athletes could not cure the sore his socks inside out because there was a hole on the other side.

"I FEEL LIKE A SPANISH GALLON." REMARKED THE FRODO, AS HE HUNG HIS TRUNK ON THE FIVE HOUSE PORCH.

"HOW'S AT?" INQUIRED A BROTHER.

"I'VE BEEN BOARDED BY PIRATES."

Another Fairy Tale
Prof. Arnold was lecturing when someone started a fire under the window. The fire reached in the room. Suddenly it stopped.

"Thank you," said the professor.

"What are you doing now?"

"Shoveling coal into the furnace over at the heating plant."

"Well, well! Deep in some day, won't you?"

All the jurgymen but one stubborn old codger had voted for acquittal, after having been in session all morning.

The sheriff came in and asked what he should order for their dinner.

"Ward!" said the foreman, reflectively, "make it eleven roast beefs." Then he added, disgustedly, "And a bale of hay."

PEACE PREARY
RED RIDING HOOD
DIARY
SHILE COMMENT

To my way of thinking, the most bizarre event in the history of the College happened Wednesday when the proxy of our sister college, George Thomas, spoke in our assembly and our proxy, E. G. Peterson, laughed at his remarks. I'd people may view this with skepticism, especially at a time when the legislature is at work determining appropriations for the two state institutions, but nevertheless and notwithstanding it is the truth and furthermore, everybody enjoyed it too. Even our own faculty caught out feeling as if this George Thomas person was no big deal. Aggie students made the remark that "he is just a man like any one else." And so, peace and quiet reigns over the two state educational institutions for the first time in years.

Why all this sinister reflection on the character of poor little Red Riding Hood? It seems a shame that after all these years, zealous housewives have to go and find out some deplorable things about some of our famous characters. Rupert Hughes went and spilled the beans on Washington, New York and other long and make suggestions about Riding Hood. I don't usually defend the weaker sex, but I think she lived a life above reproach. Mother and father she had none. Well, girls with the ingenuity of little Red Riding Hood will always keep the wolf from the door, and with honesty. I'll bet she would have been a sorority girl if she had gone to college.

DIARY OF UPPER CLASSMAN
Wonder why the bus is always late? Basketball doesn't seem to excite students like football girls wear slacks. Often, wonder what Librarian would do if no one talked in the library. Begin to understand why army court is only one not requiring jury. Found out that how little a person may know, you might learn something from him. Sgt. Calahan told the boys to lecture that America had been in over 100 wars. Didn't realize that, did you? Heard a good joke the other day. Drunken man was staggering along the sidewalk and bumped into a sorority woman. The woman stopped and said: "I don't mind your drunkenness, but your manners are terrible."

I take a bible literature class from Prof. Vickers. You know its really fun to criticize the bible. Vickers he just says they were human in those days of Jacob and his family to believe their journalism was developed to perfection. When the bible says: Joseph's brothers sold him to the Egyptians on one lie and to Ishmaelites the next, it makes one wonder if its not just a little bit safe to be a modernist. By the way a fundamentalist says, "There ain't no hell!" A modernist says, "To hell there ain't."

At 8:00 tonight and Saturday night, in the Smart gymnasium, two veteran squads—U. A. C. and B. Y. U.—will clash in what are likely to be two of the most bitterly contested hoop arguments in all the history of Rocky Mountain conference basketball.

Tonight (if you please), when the gym is packed to its rafters with sports-crazy, shouting fans; when men on the gym floor crowd with their arms and knees about with Colorado division basketball season to an early start. Last Friday seven teams rubbed shoulders as the first round of the playoffs.

Denver Teachers, division champion of that region, narrowly but handily defeated the most dangerous out-of-state rival, Black Colorado College, 29-20.

The Tigers lost after making a frantic rush in the last half. Aggie's Aggies passed the key to the School of Mines at Golden, one of the highest games ever played in the state. Aggies scored 28 points.

Boys' team retained in the quarter-finals a hot game from the promoters. Score 31-20. The boys lasted in eleven free throws of fourteen chances.

Colorado P.U.'s sold their hearts to the University of Utah. The game was called by the up with a lookster story, a host 17-21 drew a 22-28 win.

The division crown for a time. In winning from the boys, they accomplished an extremely difficult task, and indeed they are just as much. According to Russell E. Bernstein, secretary of the college, in past years Ruzser managers and editors have not been required to render account of funds until the book was published. Henceforth Bernstein will be in immediate charge of all expenditures. He suggests that advertising managers be granted a small commission on the ads they collect in order to increase their efficiency and that editors receive a bonus for praiseworthy handling of affairs.

in several methods of floor attack; above all, each team has been constantly warned against overconfidence.

Another note about the games and the which lends new interest is that, since 1919, when E. Lowell Romney assumed his duties as farmer coach, of 22 games that the Aggies and sugars have mixed in. Aggies have won 11, R. Y. F. 11. Thus, tonight's game will be something of a "playing off of the rub."
