Farmer to highlight 'Black experience'

James Farmer, former assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, former director of the Congress for Racial Equality (CORE), and one of the country's influential civil rights leaders will speak at USU tonight at 8 p.m. in the Chase Fine Arts Center.

Farmer will be the keynote speaker during Utah State's Black Emphasis Week.

Farmer was one of the pioneers in developing the direct action method which has characterized the civil rights movements since 1942, when he was among the founders of CORE. He served as CORE national director from 1961 until 1966 when he resigned to head the Center for Community Adult Education, a private agency established to develop and implement a national literacy program.

In 1961, Farmer led the Freedom Ride and was in the first group arrested in Jackson, Miss. He was next arrested in Plaquemine, La.; he was one of 233 persons arrested disturbing the peace and obstructing the sidewalk.

He was also arrested in New York City during CORE's opening day protest against the New York World's Fair.

A one-time professor, he holds bachelor's degrees from Wiley College and Howard University School of Religion. He also holds honorary doctorate degrees from Morgan State college, Jersey City State college and Muhlenberg college.

What do Blacks want?

Reporting:

Pam Taylor
Managing Editor

An old Black ghetto saying, "you're a boy until you're 65 and then you're an uncle," helped Darnell Haney, former USU basketball player who is now a counselor with the Job Corps, describe some of the reasons for the Black man's frustration in America today.

Haney spoke for the first event of Black Emphasis Week, Monday in the University Center.

There are two questions, according to Haney, that every Black is asked: what do you want to be called, and what do you want?

"I'm an American"

"If you'll excuse the expression," he said, "I want the same damn things you want -- I am an American."

Haney, who lives in Ogden now, related several experiences that he has faced while going to school and living in Utah as a Black.

His child, Haney said was sent out of a neighbor's yard by the father of the child he was playing with and told never to come back to his yard again. The neighbor according to Haney, was unwilling to talk to him and solve the conflict but tried to take out his prejudices on the child.

"How do I teach my child not to be prejudiced?" Haney asked, "When this type of behavior is being forced on him."

"I've been called everything from chocolate man, darkee, nigger, and coon, to the gladiator. All I really want to be recognized as is a man," Haney stated.

He went on to ask how the white Americans can expect the Blacks not to be frustrated when "skin is the only thing that keeps him from progressing."

Question Period

During the question-and-answer period which followed Haney's speech, he was asked if he wasn't over-generalizing the race situation.

"I may be generalizing, somewhat," he said, "but if you were in my shoes you'd see that I was not over-generalizing."

Haney expressed a special concern for young Blacks attending colleges and universities outside of their hometowns. When a group of young Blacks enters a new town they are harrassed, yet when twenty students who are Anglo move into a new city -- they're having a good time, he said.

Viewing people as people and not because of their race was one of the points Haney stressed.

Culture cries for balance

What our civilization or culture lacks is balance. A balance not only in the economic and ecological sphere, but between the secular and personal, as well.

The belief that the road to personal salvation and secular actions are in compatability is not substantiated by the Christianity as taught by Jesus. Jesus taught (recommended) worldly actions leading (perhaps) to other worldly possibilities.

But the time is passing rapidly. "The search for a new morality," it is said, "comes a critical and late date." We are at a crossroads in human history. We will either strike the balance in all (or enough) things, and strike it here in the United States, or it will be all over, only the matter of how long will be in question.

Perhaps it is in this very "late-ness" that the strongest hope for a better world and the greatest possibilities for the individuals in it are to be found. Our fears have led and are leading to an increase in the consciousness and awareness of increasing number of people. It is perhaps still largely true that "many men fear to live authentically, to be truly alive. The authority of their lives is simply turned over to another."

But this "delegating of authority," this "turning over" only works as long as that which has received this authority can provide a certain and relative degree or level of "living" to him who has relinquished it. When the authority can no longer fill the needs no matter how minimal, it begins to lose its given authority. This is one of the things that is happening today, and it is here that the Church, preferably a reborn Church, might take a hand in bringing about a better world.

It will not happen all of a sudden one day that all of the people will magically get a nice spiritual Christian consciousness and there will then be a better world. It is not possible for most people to become Christian-people until they are able to live in a society that makes this possibility more easily graspable.

So it is here on this larger scale, involving large numbers of people, that the Church, within the secular and even political arena, might be able to bring about some change. It is here that the Church, if it retains any leadership qualities among its flock, can take definite steps to lay the ground work for a better world that will improve the personal salvation possibilities for many people this surely being one of the Church's goals).

(I write this even though I believe that most so-called Church leaders today do not have a clear picture concerning the practical steps to transcendence; though this is not necessarily a hinderance to bringing about a more Christian planet earth.)

Martin Buber, noted Jewish philosopher, shapes the problem of imbalance clearly, in his discussion of the It-Thou relationship.

In America today we have an IT world, a world of external structure, which in its place and function is necessary, but when the people in it also become a part of the IT and man treats man as simply another commodity it becomes, eventually, unliveable.

THOU is the intimate-personal relationship in which people come together in brotherhood, and a relationship between the individual and that which "presides over the whole motion," and some know as God.

What must be done, and perhaps more so by enlightened church leadership, is to begin to emphasize the relationship of man-THOU, while at the same time taking steps to Christian-ize the IT. Out of actions taken in both areas will come, possibly, a harmony, a balance.

"The outlines," says Fedotov, "of a Christian system which is to replace the degenerating and chaotic capitalism are not yet clear," but it is important, I believe, to begin thinking in terms of a system based solidly on true Christian principles.

We can have such a system in which all can live in justice and brotherhood and those who might seek the higher possibility of transcendence can do so.

It is hoped that all men and women will participate in the creation of this new world, for "as man exercises his decision making capabilities he affirms and reaffirms his own humanity," thus continuing to grow and enlarge, filling his capacity as total Human Being and whatever splendid possibilities that might ultimately entail.

SMC slams referendum management

Editor:

Some question has been raised concerning the validity of the victory of the immediate withdrawal proposition in the recent Vietnam Referendum. Critics point to the low number of students voting.

We of the SMC were disappointed with the turnout - we felt that the student government in conducting the "Faces of War Week" did not try very hard to make the event an important and meaningful one for USU students.

We were disappointed with the minimal publicity, with the lack of money spent on getting interesting speakers onto the campus (the outside speakers via the telelecture were of the prowar variety), with voting irregularities which prevented some students from voting and with the short time the polls were open.

If there is doubt whether the students of USU are against the war in Vietnam, the SMC is in favor of another referendum. This time publicize it and get out the vote. Let's have some stimulating debate on the matter; put the question on the ballot in conjunction with the elections for student government. We predict immediate withdrawal will win by an even wider margin.

In response to Paul Zemkiewicz's somewhat personal attack on me: preponderant means greatest in amount and the immediate withdrawal proposition did gain preponderant support.

The referendum was conducted on three propositions: 1) immediate withdrawal 2) support of Nixon's plan of Vietnamization 3) escalation to win a military victory. It was not conducted on two propositions: 1) for immediate withdrawal 2) against immediate withdrawal. Immediate withdrawal would win in either case.

Finally, "you amaze me, Paul." For a supposed anti-war activist, I don't know who's the worst enemy of the peace movement: you or Ray Heidt. It seems your "outrage" is at the success of the SMC.

States: 'whipping boys of system'

In a speech before the members of the Rocky Mountain Assembly held here last week, William G. Colman outlined the inadequacies in state government and briefly listed his proposals for improving states' action.

Colman is the consultant to the National Urban Coalition and a businessman. He also consults for International City Management Association, Citizens Conference on State Legislatures, National Association of Counties and the Illinois Commission on Urban Government. He is a political science graduate with a master's degree from the University of Missouri and has done additional graduate work at the University of Chicago.

'Whipping Boys'

"For many years now, the states have been the whipping boys of the American federal system. In the more recent past, state government stood aside while our system of local government became increasingly impotent and anarchical," Colman told his audience.

He placed the blame partly on legislators' anti-big city bias that short changed aid programs to cities and left mayors highly suspicious of state government.

"In viewing this agenda for state government action in the 70's let us concentrate on three major areas -- strengthening the institutions of state government, modernizing local government and thoroughly reforming our machinery for the administration of justice," he said.

He called for allowing governors to serve at least two successive four-year terms, drastically shortening the state ballot to concentrate executive power in the hands of the governor, removing arbitrary restrictions on the length and frequency of legislative sessions, authorizing the governor to reorganize administrative agencies subject to legislative veto, increasing compensation of state legislators and providing for year-round professional staffing of state legislative committees.

Clarify Powers

To "civilize the jungle of local government" Colman suggested that the shackles that frustrate local efforts be removed. This can be done "by clarifying the legal powers of general purpose local governments, authorizing them to determine their own internal structure, modernizing out-dated means of controlling local government tax and debt levels, and liberalizing municipal annexation procedures."

He added that counties should be able to perform urban functions, grant authority for intergovernmental contracts, and encourage the establishment of metropolitan study commissions. State or region boundary commissions should be established to consolidate or dissolve nonviable units, he said.

Appeal is automatic

Calley convicted of murder

Reporting:

Arthur Everett
AP Writer

Ft. Benning, Ga. (AP) — Lt. William Calley was convicted Monday of the premeditated murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai three years ago. He is the first American veteran of Vietnam to be held responsible in the My Lai massacre.

Valley stood ramrod straight as the verdict was read, then snapped a salute to the jury foreman. He was flanked by his military and civilian lawyers.

Taken To Stockade

A half-hour after the verdict was announced, military police escorted him to the post stockade. "Take my word for it, the boy's crushed," his civilian attorney, George Latimer said, as they left the courtroom.

Calley was convicted of killing one person at a trail intersection, 20 at a ditch where he admitted firing six or eight bullets, of the death of a man in white and of assault on a child believed to be about 2 years old.

He had been charged with the deaths of 102 Vietnamese men, women and children.

Arrived for Verdict

Calley was notified that a verdict was ready by an Army officer who went to his bachelor apartment on the post. "They're finally ready," he said. He was tense when he arrived at the courtroom, but smiled at newsmen.

"We're with you Calley" shouted a young blonde teenager in the crowd of about 100 persons who watched Calley escorted to the two-room cell at the stockade.

The only time he will be permitted to leave is to return to court for the sentencing argument.

To convict Calley, the jury needed only the concurrence of four of the six members of the panel.

Required All Jurors

But in the sentencing phase, it will require the vote of all six members for the death sentence. And the agreement of five members is needed for a life sentence.

The jury members remained sequestered for the sentencing phase and no one was permitted to question them.

Whatever the sentence, an appeal is automatic within the military court system, and could consume months.

"I think it is a horrendous decision for the United States of America and the United States Army," said the chief defense attorney, George Latimer.

Calley, 27, took the verdict and then snapped a salute to the jury foreman, Col. Clifford Ford, 53, the only officer on the jury who is not a veteran of Vietnam.

Four-Month Trial

The conviction on the maximum charge came on the 13th day of jury deliberations following a record four-months trial.

Two enlisted men had been acquitted of lesser offenses at My Lai. But Calley as the first officer to be court-martialed in the delayed aftermath of the March 16, 1968, search and destroy mission against the little South Vietnam village.

In Gainesville, Fla. 1, Calley's family gathered to hear the verdict at the home of Calley's sister, Mary Keesling.

"No, we weren't expecting the verdict," Mrs. Keesling said over the telephone, then started weeping.

She said Calley's father and another of the lieutenant's sisters were at her home. Mrs. Keesling is the wife of a University of Florida mathematics professor.

Records office, vending machines serve students

A service to help the student and another to save him steps are in operation and appear to remain as permanent activities.

The Admission and Records office, M 106, has been open during the noon hour for the past two weeks "to give more service (to the student and faculty) and make it easier for people" to obtain the information they need, according to L. Mark Neuberger, head of Admissions and Records.

The office is manned by two staff members who are able to conduct the "normal, routine business" although not all services will be operational during the period when other offices are closed.

"It requires an added expense, but we hope it will prove worthwhile," said Neuberger, adding that an average of 10-15 persons call or come in during the lunch break.

A snack area has been located in L301 in the Library in response to requests by students asking for the vending machines, especially during the fall and winter months.

There are presently machines for dispensing soft drinks, milk, snacks and candy. According to Max Peterson, associate director of the Library, the facility "has not had much use" but there are "plans to have a complete unit in operation by next fall." A complete unit would have the same machines as in The Hive.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury-ignoring defense pleas for a "gift of life" - decreed death in San Quentin Prison's gas chamber Monday for Charles Manson and three women followers convicted of the seven savage Sharon Tate murders.

None of the defendants faced the jurors during the action. All were thrown out for shouting derogatory comments. Manson was first ordered out before any verdicts were read. He muttered: "I don't see how you can get by with this. You don't have no authority over me. You're not nearly as good as me. This is not the people's courtroom."

Ordered Manson Out

The judge first ordered him to be quiet, then ordered him out. The three women, their formerly long hair cropped close to their heads, sat silent until the first verdict of death was pronounced for Manson. Then Patricia Krenwinkel, 23, spoke to jurors: "You've all just judged yourselves."

Then Susan Atkins, 22, shouted angrily, "It's gonna come down hard. Lock your doors, protect your kids." When the judge ordered her out, she wrenched from

Jury decides Calley's guilt

In addition, the panel found him guilty as charged of the premeditated murder of a Vietnamese man dressed in the white robes of a monk.

All these findings carried a maximum penalty of death.

On a final count, Calley was found guilty of assault with intent to commit murder for shooting at a small child at the ditch.

The 5-foot-3 defendant admitted firing on one occasion into the drainage ditch full of Vietnamese captives, some of them women with babies in arms. But he said he didn't know whether he hit anyone. And he wouldn't attempt an estimate of the number of villagers cringing there in terror beneath his gunshots.

Everything Under Orders

Calley insisted that everything he did at My Lai that sultry Saturday morning three years ago he did under orders of his company commander, Capt. Ernest Medina, currently awaiting court-martial on similar charges at Ft. McPherson, Ga.

"It was no big deal," Calley testified at My Lai. "I felt then and I still do that I acted as I was directed and that I carried out the orders that I was given and I do not feel wrong in doing so."

The defense said Calley was the victim of buck-passing by Army superiors and Latimer told the jury: "Who becomes the pigeon — the lowest officer on the totem pole in this whole business."

a bailiff and shouted at the judge, "Remove yourself from the face of the earth. You're all fools."

She was led out followed by Miss Krenwinkel, who muttered, "The whole system is a game."

Last to go was Leslie Van Houten who also muttered: "You've all just judged yourselves."

Jury Chose Death

The same seven men and five women who convicted the four of first-degree murder and conspiracy last Jan. 25 chose the death penalty over the only alternative, life imprisonment

My Lai: 'eye-opener'

Reporting:

Kathryn Johnson
AP Writer

Ft. Benning, Ga. AP — "I hope My Lai isn't a tragedy but an eye-opener, even for people who say war is hell," said Lt. William L. Calley, who was convicted Monday of the premeditated murder of 22 unresisting Vietnamese civilians.

He faces the death penalty or life imprisonment.

White-Faced, Shaken

Calley 27, was white-faced and visibly shaken after the verdict in his court-martial, unprecedented in Army history. No other American had ever before stood accused of murdering more than 100 persons.

"My Lai has happened in every war. It's not an isolated incident, even in Vietnam," he told The Associated Press in an exclusive interview to be released after the verdict.

'See Hells of War'

Calley, who was a fledgling second lieutenant when he led his platoon on a devastating infantry assault on the tiny hamlet of My Lai March 16, 1968, said in the interview:

"The thing that makes My Lai so unique, it was a small tragedy in a small place, but for once, man was able to see all the hells of war all at once."

"I can't say I am proud of ever with the possibility of parole after seven years.

The state had demanded death, terming the defendants "human monsters."

The defense put on no case at the guilt phase of the trial. Highlight of the penalty phase was a parade of confessions from the women—each said they killed over the objections of their attorneys.

The state said Manson conceived the killings and ordered his "robot" followers to do them. The women said the killings were their idea, what they called "copycat" slayings to divert suspicion from a family member being in My Lai, or ever participating in war. But I will be extremely proud if My Lai shows the world what war is and that the world needs to do something about stopping wars.

"Many people say war is hell who have never experienced it," Calley added, "but it is more than hell for those people tied up in it."

Comments on Trial

Calley, commenting on his four-month trial, the longest in U.S. court-martial history and the most publicized in modern warfare, said:

"No one had yet tried to analyze the problems to my knowledge, that caused not only My Lai, but the war in Vietnam itself."

"I am hopeful that My Lai will bring the meaning of war to the surface not only to our nation but to all nations."

"My recommendation is," he added "that this nation cannot afford to involve itself in war."

'Nation Needs Army'

Calley said then even if convicted, "I still feel strongly about the Army. This nation needs a strong Army. From what I've seen of the world and communism, we definitely need an Army."

Calley, who received heavy mail from throughout the world during his trial, said, "The support of the American people is the only thing that has kept me going."

arrested in the murder of a Malibu physician. They said they painted "pig" on walls, as in the Malibu murder, to make police think the killer still was at large.

The outburst was reminiscent others that have peppered the long trial, causing the defendants to be ejected repeatedly.

Jurors Say 'Yes'

As the first of the women's death sentences were read, two women jurors appeared to be blinking back tears. When each was polled as to whether the verdicts were theirs, all clearly announced, "Yes."

The judge, thanking jurors profusely and shaking the hand of each, said if it were possible to give out medals of honor he would bestow one on each for what he called "a trying ordeal."

He said he knew of no jury sequestered for so long or put through so great a task. He told them they could discuss the case with anyone, but were under no obligation to give interviews. Once they read newspapers published during their sequestration, he said, they might understand why they were locked up so long.

USU BRIEFS

Yoga Classes

"As it is not possible to have spiritual discipline without good health, and as no meditation is possible without disciplined thoughts, so Hatha-yoga is of immeasurable value to everyone."

So said Hiro Chhatpar who will instruct Yoga classes at USU Conference and Institute Division beginning April 7. The classes will be taught each Wednesday from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Chhatpar's classes will deal with Aasana, "postural training and being able to sit in one posture comfortably and for long periods of time."

Also, Hatha-yoga (body postures and breathing exercises) will be explored. The postures are of great value to women. "They give health and strength to facilitate the birth of beautiful, healthy and strong children," Chhatpar said.

He explained that the postures are not merely physical exercises, but they have a spiritual basis, as they confer a mastery over the body, the senses and the mind.

For further information about this class, contact the Conference and Institute Division, ext. 7283.

Grant Given

A USU student has been awarded a $14,100 award to conduct an independent summer research project on problems of the environment, according to Utah Congressman Gunn McKay.

Richard H. Fuller of the USU Department of Geology was given the award as one of more than 1,000 United States college and university students receiving assistance from the National Science Foundation to study environmental problems.

Congressman McKay reports the grants, totaling almost $1.5 million were awarded to 97 colleges and universities to support research aimed at exploring some of the problems of society.

Nader Lecture

Ralph Nader, the Consumer Affairs activist, will lecture at USU on April 7, the time and place will be announced soon. His lecture topics include: Auto Safety, Corporate Responsibility and Environmental Hazards.

Ralph Nader is probably America's most famous and most effective consumer critic. He has been called everything from muckraker to consumer crusader to public defender. His documented criticisms of government and industry have had widespread repercussions on public's awareness of irregularities in nation's business and governmental activities.

Silex Course

Interested in learning to grow your own organic food? Well, through the efforts of USU student Steve Duffner and others, the new SILEX course has been created.

Organic Gardening is a two credit course and will be taught by John Beyers, Reed Roberts, Herm Fitz, and numerous other speakers; plus a lab of actual consisting of work in the garden.

Ballet West

Ballet West will be presented Tuesday, April 6 (not April 7 as originally printed on tickets).

The travelling plans of the Utah Symphony Orchestra were unexpectedly changed and in order to have them appear with Ballet West a rescheduling has taken place.

There will be tickets for the general public who do not have reserved seat tickets. Tickets will go on sale Friday morning at the USU Ticket Office.

Rallye Results

USRC's "Mini Carlo Rallye" the VW's managed to take first and second place. Trophy winners were Ron Smith, Steve Smith, Jom Thompson, K. Barnes, George Caine and Dan Sugden.

Nineteen teams entered and they hope to compete in future meets.

USRC will be holding a day rally next month.

Air Force ROTC

USU Air Force ROTC cadets could benefit by current all volunteer force legislation which is placed before the Congress. More money for cadets is included in the package of proposals to make military service more attractive and eliminate the need for the draft.

There are proposals to more than double the number of AFROTC scholarships available; to increase the $50. monthly allowance paid to $100; and to make the scholarships available to cadets in the 2-year program. It is anticipated that if the legislation enacts the proposal, it will be effective July 1.

Summer Tours

Two tours have been extended to USU for the coming summer.

The first tour is the annual University of Utah travel study program in Pau, France for this summer under Dr. Donald K. Barton, U of U professor of Language and tour director.

One change over past years is that there has been an elimination of any language pre-requisite which means that freshmen and even high school graduates are also eligible for the program.

The travel portion of the program has been expanded to include a trip to Athens, Greece.

Following seven weeks of study at the universities of Toulouse and Bordeaux, students will travel to Geneva, Rome, Athens, Vienna, and Paris.

The second tour scheduled to Europe this summer is arranged by USU and directed by Dr. Twain Tippetts, director of tours.

Dr. Kent Kimball from the University of Utah will teach courses in political science, Professor Thomas Leek, an historian from Southern Utah State College will teach early Christian Art.

For specific details and itinerary contact Dr. Twain Tippetts. The deadline for applications is April 15.

Ag thinclads third; Harrison top star

Track teams from Brigham Young and Utah held Utah State out of any first-place finishes Saturday, as the Cougars and Utes breezed to the top two spots in a four-way track meet at Provo.

USU took third in the meet and Idaho State finished last.

Wooden says Bruins could be tops again

Houston (AP) — John Wooden has some bad news for the "breakup UCLA clique."

The UCLA basketball coach loses six of his top seven players next year - only guard Henry Bibby returns - but the Bruins still should be a potent force again in the NCAA basketball championship race.

"We'll have a pretty decent ball club next year," Wooden said.

"We have a fine freshman team. There is a center off of it who will be heard from ... a fine rebounder who gets the ball to the outlet man quicker than anyone I've seen ... and a forward who is the son of a Baptist minister who can really play."

Wooden said he is enjoying his "coaching to win" instead of his coaching "not to lose."

When Wooden had the giant Lew Alcindor on his team, he said he was coaching not to lose because the Bruins were heavy favorites each time they played.

Craig Harrison and Gary DeVries were USU's top performers in the meet, as both men took second place in their respective events. Six Aggies finished with third-place ribbons.

Total scores were: BYU 122, Utah 77, USU 37, Idaho State 34.

Going outdoors for the first time this year, Craig Harrison, two-time Aggie letterman in the javelin, finished second to BYU's Raimo Pihl, who established a BYU record with an enormous distance of 252.9. Harrison and Pihl are perhaps two of the best javelin throwers in the region.

DeVries, USU's record-setting distance runner, couldn't overtake Stan Hindley of BYU in the mile, as Hindley recorded a 4:14.6 time. Mark Bingham took fifth for USU.

Two BYU shot-putters outdistanced Brian Caulfield of USU, with Arno Arrhenius taking first with a toss of 59-10. Aggie Mike Mercer did not compete.

Other third place finishers for USU included Blake Martinson in the long jump, Jerry Holmes in the 100-yard dash, Monte Miles in the steeplechase, Tim Boubelik in the discus and John Flint in the 440 hurdles.

Stan Young had a fourth place finish in the 100-yard dash and Tim Sullivan was fourth in the pole vault.

The Aggies will participate in their first outdoor dual meet of the year this Saturday when they take on Weber State in Ogden.

New York (AP) — Willie Sojourner, Weber State's star center, led the list of In-termountain area players drafted Monday by National Basketball Association teams.

Sojourner, a 6-8 jumper, was the third player drafted in the second round. He was picked by the Chicago Bulls.

Utah's star 6-4 guard, Mike Newlin, Rick Fisher of Colorado State and Willie Long of New Mexico, also were picked in the second round. Newlin by Sar Diego, Fisher by Portland and Long by Cleveland.

Utah State forward Marv Roberts, 6-8, and Dick Gibbs of Texas-El Paso, were drafted in the third round. Roberts was picked by Detroit and Gibbs by Chicago.

In the fifth round, Phoenix drafted Ken Gardner of Utah and Willie Humes of Idaho State was selected by Atlanta in the sixth round.

BYU's Steve Kelly was selected by Detroit in the seventh round.
