"Members of the Millville town board wish to express their thanks to those Utah State University students who volunteered their time and varied talents in 'Project Millville', and in the town's annual cleanup day. We sincerely appreciate the work they did Saturday and also wish to thank all those who in any way had a part in publicizing this event."

CLEANUP PROJECT — While some students removed tree trimmings others picked up trash, painted, made minor repairs and cleaned out ditches. Members of the USU chapter of the American Welding Society built bleachers for the town park. All was a part of 'Project Millville' and the town's annual cleanup activities.

Students 'cleanup' Millville

Mayor calls project a 'success'

Chris Pederson
Editor Emeritus

The population of Millville, a small Northern Utah farming community south of Logan, experienced a one-day boost of some 50 persons Saturday when students from Utah State converged on the town for a day-long cleanup.

The university students banded together under the title of 'Project Millville', and joined local residents in painting, making minor repairs, trimming and removing trees, picking up trash, weeding gardens, and cleaning and digging ditches. One group installed a drinking fountain at the town ball diamond and the USU chapter of the American Welding Society built bleachers for the park.

Annual Workday

The workday is an annual event in Millville, but this was the first time anyone from outside the community became involved. "It is really refreshing to have some people interested in helping and not asking anything in return," said Mayor John Clark, who also runs a glass-cutting business.

"It seems these kids do care about other people," he said. "I think these college kids are giving the rest of their kind a better image by working like they are in this rain."

'Project Millville' was born about three months ago when students at the university heard of the annual cleanup day in Millville and met with the town board to offer their services. "We're not so dirty that we needed help to be cleaned up, but I believe everyone needs a cleanup and these college people provided a concerted effort with our townspeople," Clark said. He said the board was "pleasantly surprised" when the students approached them for permission to help.

Free Hot Lunch

Townpeople provided the volunteers with a hot lunch in a church hall at noon. "You know, this is the first year the townspeople have chipped in and provided this lunch," Clark commented. In past years, the town paid for the meal.

Many cleanup projects were aimed at helping persons in the community unable to care for their property.

Mrs. Mila Huntz, a widow in her mid-70's, said she was proud of the students and thankful that they cared enough to help her. "If they hadn't have helped, I would have had to do what little I could and let the rest go undone. That's what I've had to do in the past," she said.

With a chuckle, Mrs. Huntz said she would welcome the workers back again next year, "If I'm still around."

Cleanup Really Helps

Another widow, Mrs. George Jessop, praised the workers and said she would have had to pay to have the work done, if it wasn't for the volunteers. "Millville is such a pretty little town and this cleanup really helps everyone here," she said.

But not everyone was happy with the student help as were the two widows. According to Clark, a few of the residents were skeptical of the students and thought they only wanted to case the area for burglaries. "But I told them they wouldn't have to worry because the type of people who are willing to come and dig ditches in the rain are the type of kids that mean well," the mayor said.

Already two other Cache county communities have expressed an interest in having the students make similar visits to their town, but no more projects are planned by the volunteers until next year.

Next year

KUSU-FM rocks on

KUSU-FM, the state owned, student operated radio voice of USU, has announced the new student directors for the 1971-72 school year.

Anyone who has interest in either of these areas is encouraged to apply at the Radio-T.V. center.

Next Year

What is going to be done next year at KUSU-FM?

"We intend to provide student programming on an educational station. And also broaden our interests in the community," said Hill.

KUSU-FM has relied heavily on educational and classical programming prior to this year. What are the chances that certain people are going to put pressures on you and your staff and try to revert back to the old ways?

"It is conceivable that there will be an increase in educational programming next year, but it will be current and relevant information. Other than that, it is the plan of the KUSU-FM staff to continue on with the programs we have had this year," Hill replied.

"We also plan to expand all student services, and bring student government closer to the students. I'd also like to promote and actively support minor sports activities on this campus," said Hill.

Commends Students

"I'd like to thank the students for their support. We greatly appreciate those who have listened to us and also the FM student staff, who put in more than $7,000 worth of labor hours. I would also like to remind those interested that KUSU-FM is still in need of new staff members."

Other Directors

There are other directors positions that, together with Keith Hill, will form the KUSU-FM team. Kirk Stirland, will fill the position of Assistant Program Director and will be Hill's right hand man.

Sue Wakefield will continue on as Educational Director, a job which she held during the past school year. Music will be selected and rejected by Jeff Brough, who will continue on as Music Director next fall.

Publicity and on-the-air production will be done by Russ Martineau, who was chosen as the new Publicity and Production Director. Jan Stocking caters to the technical needs of the station in the capacity of Technical Director.

Two directors positions which have not been filled are — News Director and Sports Director.

Council set

A Cultural Activities Council, composed of students, faculty, administration and Cache Civic Concerts representatives, has been created at Utah State University.

Purpose of the new council is to establish general policies concerning the wide range of cultural activities at USU. The Cultural Activities Council administration will make actual contracts for speakers, concerts and other cultural activities, following priority lists as closely as funds, date availability, USU scheduling and balanced programming will allow.

Students will be more involved in the scheduling committee than they have been previously and will have a voting majority through their representation of five students. Provost Gaurth Hansen will be chairman of the council.

Finally finished Commencement set

The schedule of activities surrounding the 78th annual commencement at Utah State University has been announced by Gerald R. Sherratt, commencement chairman.

More than 1,500 undergraduate degrees, 78 doctoral and 430 master degrees will be awarded June 5.

Events honoring the graduating students begin June 4 with commissioning ceremonies for cadets in the Reserve Officers Training Corps. Air Force cadets receiving their commissions number 33 while 58 Army cadets will participate in the ceremony. The commission will be held in the Chase Fine Arts Center Theater at 10 a.m.

A presentation honoring the wives of graduating students will be held at 1:45 p.m. in Main auditorium. Following the recognition awards, a reception for all graduating seniors, their families and friends will be held in the University Center at 3 p.m. The academic procession for baccalaureate services begins at 7:30 p.m. in Old Main and ends at the Spectrum where services begin at 8 p.m.

On graduation day, the degree candidates will meet for an academic procession at 8:30 a.m. in Main and march to the Spectrum where commencement ceremonies begin at 9 a.m. Graduate degree candidates will be awarded their degrees during the general session.

College graduation ceremonies for each of USU's eight colleges will begin at 11:30 a.m. The colleges and where they will meet are: Agriculture, University Center Auditorium; Business, Main Auditorium; Education, Fine Arts Center Concert Hall; Engineering, Fine Arts Theater; Family Life, Logan Institute; Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences will remain in the Spectrum; Natural Resources, Forestry-Zoology Auditorium; and Science, University Center Ballroom.

A senior picnic luncheon will begin at 12:30 p.m. on the Guadrangle.

The commencement address will be delivered by Dr. J.G. Harrar, president of the Rockefeller Foundation. The university will bestow an honorary doctor of laws degree on Dr. Harrar. The baccalaureate sermon will be given by the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University. He will receive an honorary doctor of humanities degree.

Students get garden class

Utah State University students wanted to learn to garden organically, so they requested a class in it. The result is more than 70 student gardeners.

"The 76 students are really enjoying the course and are gaining satisfaction from gardening. They don't skip class," said John M. Beyers, USU associate professor of language and philosophy.

"Organic gardening was the first course students really wanted to push through under the new SILEX program," he said. SILEX stands for Student-Initiated Learning Experience, and through it students can request classes which are not being taught.

Students asked Professor Beyers to teach the course because he has been gardening organically for four years on his one-acre plot in Hyde Park.

Herm Fitz, a USU student who recently finished a doctor's degree in botany, and Reed Roberts, USU associate professor of entomology, are co-teachers with Prof. Beyers, and they take turns lecturing.

In organic gardening, attempts are made to control insects biologically, and composts and manure are used in place of chemical fertilizers.

All members of the organic gardening class are required to write a paper or plant a garden, but most have chosen to garden.

The outdoor program

The Outdoor Program (Man and His World) has just begun to take shape and grow with the efforts of the new director J.J. Platt. By next year, with new equipment purchases and with experience gained over the summer the Outdoor Program should be in high gear.

There are some outdoor and wilderness adventures planned and being planned for the summer months. If you would like to get in on it or initiate something that really turns you on get in touch with J.J. in Uc 318 or at ex. 7644.

J. J. Platt

David Thoreau once said

By J.J. Platt
Dir. Man & His World

Henry David Thoreau once said, "I seek acquaintance with nature, — to know her moods and manners."

This past week-end, through, the new Outdoor Program at USU, eight of us journeyed north to the Jackson Hole area of Wyoming to "seek acquaintance" with the Teton Mountains and the rushing Snake River.

We saw ospreys high in needleless evergreens, elk and moose grazing on the river bank, and their fresh chewed saplings that meant beaver. Mallard ducks in pairs, Canadian honkers hawkonk - hawkonking in the air overhead, and one lone coyote watched our progress down river.

This was Saturday, and Natures mood was clouds, then rain, and finally snow, the wind whipping it upriver. A person wouldn't seek a situation like this - 4 hours in an open raft floating thru Teton National Forest - but when it happens one can sure learn a lot about oneself and about endurance and misery and about other people.

Saturdays' stretch of river, though wet and chilling, was, for the most part, placid. Sundays' river, under blue and sunny skies, was wild and crashing, it shouted its message over a boulder strewn bottom and off the canyon walls.

Wolf Creek, Elbow, Blind Canyon, and Red Creek. Yes, Red Creek I won't forget for a long time. Not the creek itself, but the particular rapids that are to be found on the Snake at that place.

It's like a perpetual wave that is stuck in the middle of a narrowing of the river. There is no way around, the river is only 30-40 feet wide at this point, and it waits for you to come sluicing down the narrows.

We did. Up the wave we went, the 15 foot raft bending in the middle, not high enough to escape a drenching, hollering Ya-hoo! Ya-hoo!, licking that good clean cold Snake River water over our faces ready and hoping for more, down the other side the raft bouncing like some huge cork, and grabbing the bailing buckets to make room for more water.

It's adventure and fun, and it's more. It's a real gut natural experience that fills your Being up to the bursting level and everyday after it's over you realize a little bit more of what you learned from the Snake River, and slowly it begins to dawn that maybe, just maybe, Nature can teach you more, about a lot of things, than you could ever get at a desk or in an easy chair. And you begin to see that maybe Nancy Newhall is right when she says, "The wilderness holds answers to more questions than we yet know how to ask." At least to the questions that really count.

Records shattered

Aggies close with Invitational win

Utah State, led by Monte Miles' record performance in the steeplechase defeated a weakened BYU team to win the USU Invitational track meet Saturday.

Miles record was one of ten set during the meet that was slowed down by cold and wet weather. The weather didn't slow down Utah State, who jumped out to an early lead by winning the steeplechase, mile run, and javelin and placing eight men in the first 4 events.

Point Winner

Gary De Vries finished the season as the leading Aggie point getter by winning the mile and placing second in the 880-yard run. Craig Harrison was the only Aggie to qualify for the NCAA championships. Harrison won the Javelin with a throw of 226-9 feet.

BYU high jumper Alarotu set an invitational record and qualified for the NCAA championship with a jump of 6-10. Alarotu broke Willie Sojourner's record of 6-9 set in 1969. Other Cougars who set records included Richard Reid who won the three mile with a time of 14:39.3. Reid's time broke the old record by 30 seconds. Tarnani of BYU won the 440-yard run with a record setting time of 47.2 seconds.

Even with three record setting performances the weakened

Cougars couldn't catch Utah State. The Aggies placed 15 players as they accumulated 83 points to BYU's 58.

Jerry Holmes of Utah State and Carson of the University of Utah battled in the sprints. Holmes won the 100-yard dash and placed second in the 100-yard dash.

Aggie Mark Bingham broke the only 880 record by three seconds as he won the race with a time of 1:52.8. Bingham's record and the records of the other performers were over-shadowed by Aggie assistant track coach Aim Roost who broke the discus record. Roost eclipsed former Aggie L. Jay Sylvesters old mark by 3 feet with a throw of 192-10 feet.
