This bulletin contains salad recipes which were prepared and consumed at an Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP) annual training session held at Utah State University. Each nutrition assistant was asked to prepare a favorite salad for lunch and to also share the recipes. It was such a success we wanted to share it.

The recipes were analyzed for content of the following nutrients.

Suggestions for use:

- Have participants bring the salads. This allows them to share their creative talents and provides lunch or refreshments.
- It is a natural for a lunch and learn series.
- The nutrient analysis information could be used for a discussion on controlling calories, limiting fat intake or increasing fiber in the diet.
- The suggestions in the revised Dietary Guidelines to increase fruit and vegetable consumption could be expanded.
- The two recipes for broccoli salad are a wonderful example of how to reduce calories and total fat by making ingredient adjustments.
- New and interesting salads are especially welcome during the summer season for family meals.

CHICKEN CANTALOUPE/RED GRAPE SALAD
Susan Leeflang

1¼ cups uncooked Rosa Marina, cook and drain
2 large cantaloupe, cut or in melon balls
3 Tbsp. oil
4 tsp. orange juice
4 tsp. vinegar
1 tsp. salt
4 cups cubed chicken or turkey

1 cup diced celery
1 cup red seedless grapes (she adds more—about 4 cups)
¾ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
¾ cup cashews
½ tsp. grated orange rind (she uses about 1+ Tbsp.)

She adds more dressing and 1–2 tsp. sugar to the dressing. You can cut the cantaloupe in wedges and serve the salad in the wedges. You can make the salad in advance, especially to blend the flavors, but do not add the cashews until time to serve, as they will go soggy.
